

JUNE WINE OF THE MONTH

ZONDA

VINO DE LOS ANDES

Cultivated in the international path of one of the world's most iconic winds, Zonda is named after the natural forces at play in the vineyards of Argentina and Chile. A blend of Cabernet Sauvignon and Malbec from two different countries produces one powerful wine.

THE WITCHES WIND

Argentina and Chile are two of South America's prime wine-producing regions, both with unique terroirs, methods, and history. Still, they share some commonalities besides a mutual border, and one of them is the Zonda wind, a natural phenomenon resulting from humid air rising off the Pacific.

We've named this wine after this legendary wind, which blows downward along the slopes of the Andes mountains and is an essential factor of the terroir in world-class wine-growing regions in both Argentina and Chile. During the winter months, Zonda encourages snow in the high altitudes of the Andes, which melts in the warmer months to enhance vineyards with much-needed moisture. During the growing season, it cools the berries at night, enhancing acidity without compromising complexity.

With the nickname "the witches wind," it can blow nonstop for hours, echoing a sound similar to a human whistle.

DELICIOUSNESS IN COMMON

It's uncommon to find a blend of grapes from different regions, let alone different countries, but we see this bottle as a customized snapshot of South America — crafted particularly for our Wine Club Members. At Cooper's Hawk, we've released an Argentine Malbec and Chilean Cabernet Sauvignon — both incredibly delicious and highly successful. Like the wind that links these fascinating countries, this red wine also brings them together, connecting them in unseen yet sensual and tangible ways.

Zonda is a rich, full-bodied red blend with the depth and power to match this monumental force of nature. Dark fruit, pepper, and vanilla aromatics hint at ripe, dark fruit flavors, balanced tannins, and on-point acidity. Cooper's Hawk Churrasco Grilled Steak and aged cheddar cheeses.

Cheers to two different countries, two different wine varieties, one incredible blend.

WINEMAKER'S NOTES

Grape-growing regions around the world are very proud of what they do, and rightly so. Most, however, would not consider blending grapes from different regions because it would detract from their sense of terroir and the uniqueness of their wines. At Cooper's Hawk, we have produced both a Chilean Cabernet Sauvignon and an Argentine Malbec for our Wine Club members. Both were delicious and wildly successful, so we decided to do something special and produce a blend of the two. Two different countries and two different wine varieties lead to one incredible blend.

TASTING NOTES

EMILY WINES

MASTER SOMMELIER

BEGINNER

Zonda is our wine that celebrates the Andes Mountains. Bold, dark Cabernet Sauvignon from Chile and juicy, rich Malbec from Argentina combine to make a mouth watering wine loaded with pomegranate, blueberry, chocolate, and black pepper flavors. The wine has great complexity on its own but the bright acidity and soft tannins make it an ultimate food wine.

INTERMEDIATE

There is nothing better than eating local cuisine in wine country. In Chile and Argentina, red meat reigns supreme. Grass-fed beef is slow roasted over hot coals and served with an herbal Chimichurri sauce. This sauce is loads with parsley, garlic, and red wine vinegar which contrasts with the rich, smoky flavors of beef. It also complements a wine like Zonda! Foods and wines that are created in the same region have a natural affinity for one another, and this is one of the best examples of a great regional pairing.

ADVANCED

Bordeaux varietals found an early fan base in Chile and Argentina and were among the first fine wines made in these countries. Chile is known for producing Bordeaux-style wines with incredible elegance and savory herbal tones. The cool Pacific ocean breezes wash over the vineyards, losing all their perception in the Andes Mountains. On the back side of the mountains, in a rain shadow, lies Argentina. The altitude of the Mendoza valley lends itself to producing Malbecs with incredible intensity, power, and saturated flavor. The Zonda wind that whips over these mountains regulates the climate to create world-class wines on both sides of the border.

CULINARY CREATIONS

SWEET & CRUNCHY SHRIMP

Have you tried our Sweet & Crunchy Shrimp, one of the newest appetizers to grace the Cooper's Hawk menu?

The ingredient list for the dish is packed with Asian flavors and textures, offering both exotic and familiar temptations. We start with hand-battered shrimp coated with crispy panko bread crumbs and sesame seed and fried to a golden brown. For a fresh contrast, we pop the shrimp on a bed of Asian cabbage slaw with pineapple and crispy puffed rice which is tossed with fresh herbs and sesame ginger dressing.

Everything comes together at the table, served with Bibb lettuce leaves and a crisp wedge of lime — wrap it up and enjoy with a generous dip of cashew dipping sauce and Gochujang aioli. Gochujang (red chili paste) is savory and sweet with a touch of spice; this is a fermented condiment made from chili powder, glutinous rice, meju (fermented soybean) powder, yeotgireum (barley-malt), and salt. Talk about bursting with flavor, especially when paired with Cooper's Hawk Rosé.

JUNE RECIPE OF THE MONTH

Grilled Prime Skirt Steak with Chimichurri

Zonda is an amazing blend of both a Chilean Cabernet Sauvignon and an Argentinian Malbec, which gives this wine all the full-flavor richness of dark fruits and black pepper but also a balance of just enough tannins and acidity. Such a well-balanced wine is the perfect pairing for food. To complement such a unique palate of flavors, I wanted to pair this with a classic South American dish of grilled prime skirt steak with chimichurri. Simple but delicious, this combination of food and wine is a match made for a perfect meal!

— Chef Brett Dr. Drullin

INGREDIENTS

CHIMICHURRI

1 cup cilantro, roughly chopped	1 Tbsp white wine vinegar
1 cup Italian parsley, roughly chopped	1 Tbsp lime juice, freshly squeezed
2 Tbsp shallots, roughly chopped	1 tsp kosher salt
2 tsp garlic, minced	¼ tsp sugar
1 jalapeño, de-seeded and chopped	¼ tsp freshly cracked black pepper
	¾ cup extra virgin olive oil, as needed

SKIRT STEAKS

2 prime skirt steaks (8 oz each)	2 tsp coarse kosher salt
2 tsp extra virgin olive oil	1 tsp freshly cracked black pepper
	1 tsp cracked fennel seed

DIRECTIONS

To prepare the chimichurri, gather all ingredients listed and add to a food processor fitted with a metal blade. Pulse slightly to combine ingredients and slowly add oil until evenly mixed and mostly smooth. Cover and refrigerate to let flavors fully incorporate.

Prepare grill for cooking over direct heat with hot charcoal or over medium-high heat for a gas grill.

Pat steaks dry and rub with extra virgin olive oil. Sprinkle both sides with salt, freshly cracked pepper and cracked fennel seed. Grill steaks for 3-4 minutes per side for medium rare, only turning over once and moving around to avoid flare-ups if necessary. Transfer steaks to a cutting board and let stand, loosely covered with foil, 5 minutes. Thinly slice steaks diagonally to make sure you are cutting against the grain.

Drizzle with chimichurri and enjoy! Make sure to sip with your Zonda! AMAZING!!

July's WINE OF THE MONTH

COLLABORATION TROIS

PINOT NOIR

Some of our most treasured wines start as conversations, ideas born in vineyards, restaurants, or tasting rooms with people who inspire us. Collaboration* Trois represents the third red wine produced in partnership with John-Charles Boisset and Cooper's Hawk, this time harnessing the captivating DeLoach Vineyards in Sonoma's Russian River Valley. This world-class Pinot Noir is made exclusively for Cooper's Hawk Wine Club Members with the spirit of this lasting connection.

Celebrate Rosé!

Rosé may seem like it just burst onto the wine scene, but it has actually been around for centuries. While the ancients vinified their red grapes into pink wine to avoid astringent tannins, it wasn't till the 19th century, when tourists flocked to the Côte d'Azur in southern France, that rosé really took off. In that balmy seaside region, nothing was more in vogue than drinking ice cold rosé (the French word for pink) and it soon became a symbol of glamour, leisure, and summertime. The beloved rosé lost its glow with the birth of low-quality, fruity rosés, like Mateus and White Zinfandel. While White Zin is a success story of its own, it completely changed the American perception of what pink wines tasted like and the assumption quickly grew that all rosé is sweet. Sweetness is simply a matter of winemaking decisions. By stopping fermentation early, sugar remains – and these can be absolutely delicious wines. That being said, sugar also hides lots of flaws, so this is one reason so many poor quality rosé wines have been sweet.

Unpretentious, fun and fresh, these wines have become a symbol of summer once again.

— EMILY WINES

The most common way to make rosé wine is with a method called saignée, or bleeding off. Nearly all red grapes have pale, golden-colored flesh. The color for the wine comes from soaking the skins in the juice. Color isn't the only thing that the skins provide, however; tannins and an intensity of flavors are also extracted during this maceration. It is a common practice for winemakers to "bleed off" a little wine during this soak, increasing the ratio of grape skins to wine and thus intensifying the flavors and color. The bled off wine is pink, giving the winemaker something refreshing to drink while the red wine is being finished. Through the later 20th century many wineries had a little rosé, but none marketed it as there was no market for it.

Luckily, there has continued to be a summertime fascination with the dry rosé wines of Provence, and in the early 2000s rosé popularity started to build. In August of 2014, panic struck when the Hamptons ran out of rosé. It was proof that Americans had fallen in love with rosé again. Soon a rush of rosés hit the market and celebrities were quick to get in on the action. Unpretentious, fun and fresh, these wines have become a symbol of summer once again.

Now that the love of rosé is here to stay, wine makers can really focus on making these wines to a specific style. The amount of skin contact determines a lot of the flavor and color in the ultimate wine. This is why there are so many different shades of rosé! From the palest pink to the most rich fuchsia, they are all delicious and unique.
